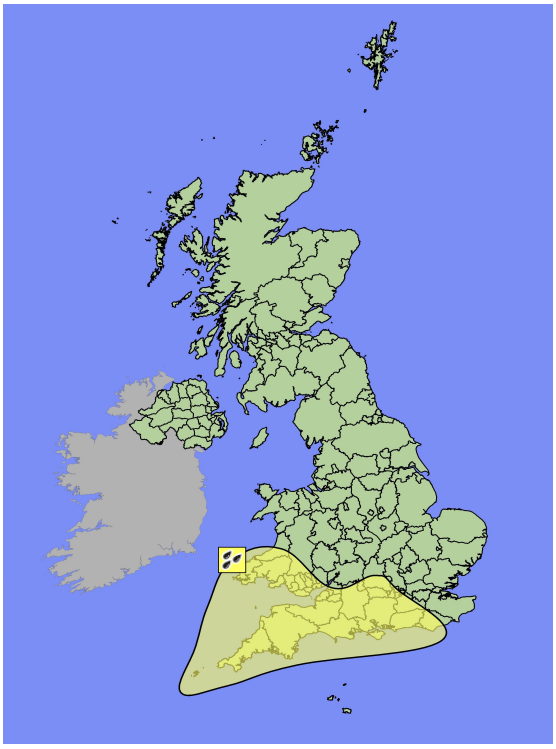
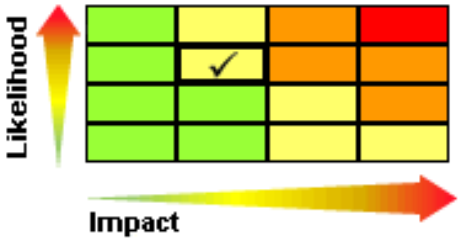
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A low pressure system will pass quickly eastwards close to southern parts of England during Friday morning. While most areas will see no more than 10-15mm of rain, there remains potential for 20-25mm in places, which given current ground and river sensitivities might result in some localised flooding.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:05 on Fri, 01st Feb 2013 until 12:00 on Fri, 01st Feb 2013

Another spell of rain will spread to parts of Wales and southern England on Friday morning. The rain may turn to snow at times over hills. The public should be aware that further localised flooding and disruption to travel is possible.

This is an update to the alert issued on Wednesday morning.
